

We need as much relief from telemarketers that the state can provide. I strongly recommend leaving New Jersey's Telephone Consumer Protection Act in tact. Weakening this law defeats the entire purpose of the list. The unwanted calls very often come at critical times during the day and night, certainly not resulting in any positive results for the telemarketer and leaving an angry consumer. We need the continued strength of the New Jersey law to provide the peace of mind to which each citizen is entitled.
